

THE Big 3

EPISODE: 254

TITLE: The Blessing Of Praying For Your Child's Future

As Christians, consistently praying for your kids may seem obvious. To pray for your child's future spouse may be less obvious, but it's a privilege that carries with it some pretty awesome blessings.

Here are three key things to believe and consider about praying for your child's future...

1. Praying for your child's future shows that you trust God for their lives. It's easy to fall into the habit of only praying for help when things go bad in our life or in the life of our child, but God cares about their yesterdays, todays, and all of their tomorrows. What a privilege it is to bring your child, and their future spouse and family, before the throne of God!
2. God's love for our kids far surpasses our parenting skills! None of us are perfect parents or pray as consistently for our kids as we could, but please believe God desires that your children would grow up to know him, trust him, and bring him great glory with their lives. His desire to bless them is bigger than your performance as a parent. And He has the power and resources to do it!
3. Start making prayer for your child's future, and their future spouse and family, a regular rhythm today. Download the free guide for how to start praying this way. Take just one of the 7 ways each day, maybe before you go to bed, and pray in this manner throughout the week. I truly believe God will honor your prayers (they're already in line with his will), and you'll be grateful and amazed at the favor and blessings he will pour into your children's lives!
