

THE Big 3

EPISODE: 201

TITLE: Leadership Harmony in Missional Communities

Leaders show others God's grace and what it looks like to know and live out the good news of the Kingdom in every area of life.

Here are three things to believe and consider about leading missional communities and developing others to lead...

1. You are part of God's family, and everyone is important—but Different. People have different skills and perspectives, different life experience, gifting, and maturity. And God is aware of all of it. And... he has brought you together for just a time as this. Trust him to work out the beautiful tapestry that is his Family in your community and among your leadership.
2. If God has clearly called you to lead others, it is a high and humble calling. God shows his grace on Earth through people, and leaders show others God's grace and what it looks like to know and live out the good news of the Kingdom in every area of life. Your job in leading a missional community (or a church for that matter) is primarily that—not to be in charge and make all the decisions about what everyone else is supposed to do.
3. Be sure that the things you agree on (and the things you don't) are actually that. Our words and assumptions can lead us into hard, hurtful places. Churches and communities have split throughout history over misunderstanding and language or cultural differences. As a leadership team, it is good to read and pray through the "One-anothers" that are found in the gospels together frequently or when conflict arises.
