

THE Big 3

EPISODE: 124

TITLE: What to Do with Kids in Your Missional Community

Kids are part of your family and an important part of your missional community. They are not just an annoyance or people to be entertained. Healthy families have people of all ages involved in important ways and together display what the kingdom of God is like.

Here are three key things to believe and consider:

1. Kids are part of your family and an important part of your missional community. They are not just an annoyance or people to be entertained. Healthy families have people of all ages involved in important ways and together display what the kingdom of God is like.
2. A true, life-giving missional community is not a weekly meeting: it is a daily, vibrant experience in the normal rhythms of your life. It is a life lived with discipleship and mission radically prioritized as a lifestyle along with your entire family and close friends...and their kids.
3. There is a HIGH chance that your kids may abandon their Christian faith or be enticed by a weird, watered down, almost Christian version of things. Without getting some training, or investing the time and effort to get equipped to really live and experience a vibrant gospel-centered community, like a family together, you'll be left "hoping for a miracle"!

If you need help in learning... unlearning... relearning how to live this "kingdom now" lifestyle, check out this rare opportunity to join Caesar and his family (in their home) for a unique experience:
