

THE Big 3

EPISODE: 214

TITLE: Is Your Family Prepared for Missional Living?

We want our families to live in such a way that as we invite folks into our lives and normal rhythms, they are in fact increasingly great opportunities for true discipleship.

Here are three things to believe and consider about living as a family on mission:

1. Believe that you are part of God's family on mission and that YOU are a missionary. Stagnant, compulsory church attendance is not the end goal for our life and faith. Living Jesus' life on his family's mission is a lifestyle and identity, not a set of activities. We get to do this!
2. Live as a family worth imitating, and that others want to join before trying to create artificial family rhythms with a large group of others. The goal is that your family is living in such a way that discipleship and community naturally grow out of it. We're not looking to live two lives...an isolated "US/OUR life"... and then throw a lasso around a bunch of folks once a week and try and get them into artificial rhythms.
3. Start to see and treat everyone like family. Be hyper inclusive in the normal rhythms of your life. Inviting people to simple meals, yard projects, walks in the park, to the store, etc. begin to extend your family life to others and increase the invitation to see faith and discipleship as part of everyday life together.
