TITLE: Rethinking Family as a Team on Mission

For many in Western civilization, our idea of family seems like a failed experiment. We've been sold the line that the family primarily exists as a springboard for the individual. But what if our families functioned more like a team—a team on a mission?

Here are three key things to believe and consider about helping your family become a team...

1. God designed the family to be a team. If you're anywhere in Western culture, then chances are the design of your family has been to be a springboard for individual success... but God wants you to have a team. And that's going to take a transition. It will be a different way of thinking and BEing together, and it will take a lot of intentionality.
2. You can start from anywhere it's never too late. You can start from here. There's so much that God can and wants to do through your family, and every generation is a step forward. You can't do all of it in one generation. So do what you're called to do in your generation and things will continue in your family line from there. You can set a new trajectory for your family for generations to come!
3. To get started, the first thing is to craft that weekly family meal together. Something that is uniquely your family meal, and be sure to let your kids really put their stamp on it. Make it an expression of your family culture. Make it a time when you celebrate the goodness of God. And as you do that, that identity of your family will go deeper and deeper. And from there you can launch into all kinds of things that are Kingdom activities for the sake of the Gospel.
